and of course my body – still working on shrinking that one back though. My children are gifts that help me to see the eternal perspective. We are not just here for ourselves, everything we do or don't do has an impact not only on our immediate sphere of influence but it can ripple out throughout the world for generations to come – good or bad.

D: It has shaped me in many ways. This sounds strange, but my kids have taught me how to be a kid. In our household we have a high value on creating a fun, loving and respectful environment. Some days I may be a little stressed about work. Kids make me realise sometimes the things I stress about aren't the most important things in life. They have a capacity to have fun in the midst of a tough day.

What was the reasoning behind moving the family to Queensland?

D: The main reason was to move to an environment where I believe it would be best for my family. A place where I could create a loving, caring and nurturing environment to raise my children so they could become all that they are meant to be.

Since moving to the beautiful Sunshine Coast, have you noticed a change in your attitude to life?

S: I love the Sunshine Coast. For me there is a freedom to breathe and allow my mind to unfold having space around me. My favourite colours are emerald green and aqua, so the beautiful Coast is absolutely perfect for me! It is calming, loving and peaceful. How blessed we are to live in one of the greatest holiday destinations in the world.
